Suggested Changes to Ferry Line Procedures

At last week's Maine State Ferry Advisory Board meeting, a 'Safety Team' from Maine's DOT showed us a proposal addressing safety concerns at the terminal which includes prohibiting the use of 'line cars' and substituting, instead a 'shoot' system, whereby anyone wanting to board a given departure to the islands can put their vehicle (not a line car) in one of several parallel lines they referred to as chutes (yes, it was them who misspelled it 'shoot' although, in suggesting gunfire they were probably not far off) up to 90 minutes prior to departure and no sooner. Once in line it cannot be moved.

The Vinalhaven (me) and North Haven representatives to the Advisory Board voiced our absolute objection to the proposal, but there is certainly no reason to think our opinions will make a difference.

Please think carefully about the complete range of consequences to us all if this change is implemented and register your own thoughts with those who represent you:

Did You Know?

When islands or ships appear to be floating above the sea, this is known as a superior mirage. Superior mirages occur because of "special atmospheric conditions that bend light." When cold air lies close to the sea, but has warmer air above it, it is known as temperature inversion and can cause objects to appear above the water.

Happy Birthday Maine!

By the time most of you will read this it will be March 15, which is too important a day to ignore. As the man who taught me to use a chainsaw said, it is immortalized by Shakespeare's famous warning: "Cedar! Beware the adze of March!"

He put it that way because the importance of March 15 is, of course, that it is the day in 1820 that Maine, the Pine Tree State, joined the Union.

Maine statehood had national repercussions. The inhabitants of this northern part of Massachusetts had asked for statehood in 1819, but their petition was stopped dead by southerners who refused to permit a free state—one that did not permit slavery—to enter the Union without a corresponding "slave state." The explosive growth of the northern states had already given free states control of the House of Representatives, but the South held its own in the Senate, where each state got two votes. The admission of Maine would give the North the advantage, and southerners insisted that Maine's admission be balanced with the admission of a southern slave state, lest those opposed to slavery use their power in the federal government to restrict enslavement in the South.

They demanded the admission of Missouri to counteract Maine's two "free" Senate votes.

But this "Missouri Compromise" infuriated northerners, especially those who lived in Maine. They swamped Congress with petitions against admitting Missouri as a slave state, resenting that slave owners in the Senate could hold the state of Maine hostage until they got their way. Tempers rose high enough that Thomas Jefferson wrote to Massachusetts—and later Maine—Senator John Holmes that he had for a long time been content with the direction of the country, but that the Missouri question "like a fire bell in the night, awakened and filled me with terror. I considered it at once as the knell of the Union It is hushed indeed for the moment, but this is a reprieve only, not a final sentence."

Congress passed the Missouri Compromise, but Jefferson was right to see it as nothing more than a reprieve.

The petition drive that had begun as an effort to keep the admission of Maine from being tied to the admission of Missouri continued as a movement to get Congress to whittle away at slavery where it could—by, for example, outlawing slave sales in the nation's capital—and would become a key point of friction between the North and the South.

There was also another powerful way in which the conditions of the state's entry into the Union would affect American history. Mainers were angry that their statehood had been tied to the demands of far distant slave owners, and that anger worked its way into the state's popular culture. The opening of the Erie Canal in 1825 meant that Maine men, who grew up steeped in that anger, could spread west.

And so they did.

In 1837, Elijah P. Lovejoy, who had moved to Alton, Illinois, from Albion, Maine, to begin a newspaper dedicated to the abolition of human enslavement, was murdered by a pro-slavery mob, who threw his printing press into the Mississippi River.

Elijah Lovejoy's younger brother, Owen, had also moved west from Maine. Owen saw Elijah shot and swore his allegiance to the cause of abolition. "I shall never forsake the cause that has been sprinkled with my brother's blood," he declared. He turned to politics, and in 1854, he was elected to the Illinois state legislature. His increasing prominence brought him political friends, including an up-and-coming lawyer who had arrived in Illinois from Kentucky, Abraham Lincoln.

Lovejoy and Lincoln were also friends with another Maine man gone to Illinois. Elihu Washburne had been born in Livermore, Maine, in 1816, when Maine was still part of Massachusetts. He was one of seven brothers, and one by one, his brothers had all left home, most of them to move west. Israel Washburn, Jr., the oldest, stayed in Maine, but Cadwallader moved to Wisconsin, and William Drew would follow, going to Minnesota. (Elihu was the only brother who spelled his last name with an e).

Israel and Elihu were both serving in Congress in 1854 when Congress passed the Kansas-Nebraska Act overturning the Missouri Compromise and permitting the spread of slavery to the West. Furious, Israel called a meeting of 30 congressmen in May to figure out how they could come together to stand against the Slave Power that had commandeered the government to spread the South's system of human enslavement. They met in the rooms of Representative Edward Dickinson, of Massachusetts-- whose talented daughter Emily was already writing poems-- and while they came to the meeting from all different political parties, they left with one sole principle: to stop the Slave Power that was turning the government into an oligarchy.

The men scattered for the summer back to their homes across the North, sharing their conviction that a new party must rise to stand against the Slave Power. In the fall, those calling themselves "anti-Nebraska" candidates were sweeping into office—Cadwallader Washburn would be elected from Wisconsin in 1854 and Owen Lovejoy from Illinois in 1856—and they would, indeed, create a new political party: the Republicans. The new party took deep root in Maine, flipping the state from Democratic to Republican in 1856, the first time it fielded a presidential candidate.

In 1859, Abraham Lincoln would articulate an ideology for the party, defining it as the party of ordinary Americans standing together against the oligarchs of slavery, and when he ran for president in 1860, he knew it was imperative that he get the momentum of Maine men on his side. In those days Maine voted for state and local offices in September, rather than November, so a party's win in Maine could start a wave. "As Maine goes, so goes the nation," the saying went.

So Lincoln turned to Hannibal Hamlin, who represented Maine in the Senate (and whose father had built the house in which the Washburnes grew up). Lincoln won 62% of the vote in Maine in 1860, taking all 8 of the state's electoral votes, and went on to win the election. When he arrived in Washington quietly in late February to take office the following March, Elihu Washburne was at the railroad station to greet him.

I was not a great student in college. I liked learning, but not on someone else's timetable. It was this story that woke me up and made me a scholar. I found it fascinating that a group of ordinary people from country towns who shared a fear that they were losing their democracy could figure out how to work together to reclaim it.

Round Up...for the Grange!

The Pleasant River Grange #492 would like to thank those who are rounding up for the Grange at Carver's Harbor Market.

Our building is on the National Register of Historic Places in Maine. It has been on the current site since 1908, donated by A. M. Webster. We are trying to repair and care for it with the following projects:

- Upgrade our heating system so we can have year round activities, programs and events.
- Make the old hand dug well functional so we will not have to carry water to the property.
- Reshingle the south side, replace the trim and doors, and install gutters to preserve the building.

Unfortunately, our coffers are unable to deal with even one of these projects.

We are, therefore, asking our friends for additional help. If you could, please send your donation (any amount is greatly appreciated) to:

Pleasant River Grange #492 c/o Penelope Lord, Treasurer PO Box 669, Vinalhaven, ME 04863

The Grange members sincerely thank you!

Single-Stream Recycling

Presents

NO BUBBLE WRAP! NO MAILERS!

Q: Can I recycle bubble-wrap and padded envelopes?

A: NO! DEFINITELY NOT with single-stream! Kenny and Luther have been pulling A LOT of bubble wrap and padded mailers (tyvek, paper, plastic, bubble-any and all kinds) out of the single-stream bin. It's tempting to toss these items into the bin, believing they are recyclable, but DON'T. These items can be RE-USED and can be recycled at certain special locations, but with our single-stream system they are considered contamination REGARDLESS of whether they have a recycling symbol or number on them. We will get fined by ecomaine for putting them in the single-stream!

Remember: When in doubt, throw it out!

To everyone who has been praying for, and sending encouragement to Collin and his family, THANK YOU!

Personally, I struggle with words enough to express my gratitude. And I apologize for not posting an update on Mitzi before now, but life has gotten a bit crazy.

After 4 months of aggressive chemo treatments, Mitzi is finally in remission!! Praise the Lord! But since she has such an aggressive cancer, she does need a bone marrow transplant, and now is the time to do it, before the cancer cells grow back. It is scheduled for Tuesday, March 16. She will be in the hospital for a minimum of 6 weeks, more likely closer to 3 months. Big sister Penny (almost 3) will be the donor. Mitzi has been receiving serious chemo every 6 hours this week and is expected to have extreme negative side effects starting about the time she has the transplant. The next 100 days will be critical, so please continue to pray for them all.

I also want to thank everyone who purchased t-shirts in support of Mitzi.

The ladies that were making the shirts and running the fundraiser have had a series of serious personal tragedies, so we are no longer doing that. Thank you to all who purchased them and posted pictures. It warms my heart to see the support of our Vinalhaven community.

Anyone who would still like to make a donation to help with meals and other expenses (Taylor can only handle so much hospital food) can do so directly at their Venmo account: taylorliannepayne. Cards or notes of encouragement can also be sent to them at:

Taylor and Mitzi Payne c/o Riley's Children's Hospital 705 Riley Hospital Drive Indianapolis, IN 46202-5109 Thank you so much! Love to all!

Fun Fact: Did you know IVC has been a 501c3 nonprofit organization since it began in 2008? We often rely on donations that go toward equipment and materials for the children in our care and moving and renovation costs.

Moving Update: We have put an offer on a house; however, we are still waiting for a response. In the meantime, IVC is continuing their search for the perfect space for our childcare. If you have any ideas or buildings for lease or purchase, please let us know! We only have until mid-June in our current space. Time is running out!

More Or Less

When more isn't enough I'm left with less which comes in buoyant filled with importance as if to say I am enough

Then I see the poignant details of my life, the etched lines of worry and care the lift of heart on invisible air the way a moment slides round the corner leaving its taste behind sweet reminder to hold it dear

So like breathing I go in and out sometimes catching the beauty sometimes not, and I must practice what once was habit seeing the magic, the play of light on the smallest of things the music in between the layers

Current State of Maine Guidelines:

To maximize our limited vaccine supply and ensure every dose is used to protect the health of Maine people, Maine is using an age-based approach for vaccination eligibility. While vaccination is planned to proceed consecutively through the age groups outlined below, flexibility is possible based on vaccination progress and vaccine supply.

Vaccination Eligibility by Age:

People Age 60 and Older Now Eligible

VH School staff and Day care workers are Now Eligible

*Only Maine residents are eligible to receive a vaccine in Maine at this time. Exact dates for age-eligibility will be announced.

March 3: Age 60 and older

April: Age 50 and older May: Age 40 and older June: Age 30 and older

July: All ages, including children pending authorization of a child vaccine

Current Islands Community Medical Services, Inc. Distribution Guidelines:

ICMS is listed as a patient only vaccination site. ICMS follows State Guidelines to determine eligibility. ICMS receives an allocation of 110 doses biweekly. Eligibility determination is based on State requirements and then by risk stratification within the State's age eligibility criteria.

If leftover vaccines are available, ICMS will vaccinate non-patients who meet the State of Maine residency requirements and meet the eligibility age. All alternates are required to provide proof that Maine is their primary residency. If you do not have a Maine license, please contact Anna Clapham.

No Doses Will Be Wasted!

Total doses (includes 1st and 2nd) administered to Islanders: 506 Doses

Percentage of Vinalhaven population vaccinated: 33%

National Immunization Rates (1st doses only): 21.4%

National Immunization Rates (includes 1st and 2nd): 11.5%

State of Maine Population immunized: 13.95%

ICMS will be holding a COVID-19 Vaccine Clinic for first doses on Saturday, March 20th between 9:00-1:15pm at the school gym, by appointment only. We will contact patients to schedule once we have the vaccines on hand.

For Questions on COVID-19 Vaccines, please contact: Anna Clapham at aclapham@icmsvh.org, or by phone 207.863.4341 ex.1126.

Brown Tail Moth Awareness

Have you or someone you know been affected by the rash caused by browntail moths? If so, NOW is the time to control their caterpillars, while they are still in the web.

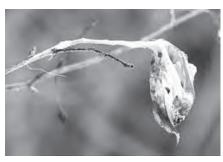

Inspect the tips of branches on hardwood trees, especially oak, apple, and other fruit trees to locate the webs. To see what the webs look like and how to remove them:

To remove: clip and destroy the webs within reach. This is best done before mid-April and always wear eye protection and cover hands and skin. For more information:

Why Does Conflict Escalate Between Men and Women?

A couple are having an argument, the woman is hurt and angry. Her husband/partner can clearly see she's upset, and her tears make him surprisingly uncomfortable. While he would like to feel empathic there is something about her strong feelings that is distressing to him and gets in the way. Because he is uncomfortable with his own strong feelings, the man begins to emotionally withdraw and detach to protect himself. For reasons he doesn't fully understand, it becomes increasingly important to him to remain rational and unemotional, and he is increasingly critical of, and irritated with, his wife for being "too emotional."

The wife can feel her husband withdrawing, and the more he withdraws, the more anxious she becomes and the more urgently she pursues him to find a way to make some kind of emotional connection with him.

Now, they are locked in a mutually destructive cycle; the more she pushes for the emotional connection she yearns for, the more he detaches. The more he tries to control his own fear by detaching, the more anxious she gets.

In these relationships, when women's interest in connection and intimacy is not met by their partners, it puts those women in a vulnerable one down position. The less powerful person is inevitably in the demanding position, pushing for change in the relationship that would put her on a more equal footing. Since men benefit from the emotional status quo in the relationship, they withdraw to resist any change.

The way out of this escalating conflict is for each partner to claim aspects of the other's position in order to depolarize the couple. For men, this means relinquishing some of the privilege inherent in the withdrawn, avoidant position and allowing themselves to be more aware of, and then risking acknowledging some of their own needs for intimate connection, and their dependency on their wives/partners.

Reading Online Wind on a Kindle

Norbert Leser shared his steps for converting the online Wind into a more easily readable version on a Kindle.

- 1. Download the wind to your computer/device
- 2. Create an email message addressed to your Kindle account
- 3. Subject of the email is the word "Convert"
- 4. Attach the wind PDF to the email body (no other text)
- 5. Send email
- 6. After a short while open your Kindle app and synchronize The Wind should appear in your library!

To find the Kindle email account mentioned above, you need to open the Kindle app and go to 'App Settings' in your menu at Kindle's home page. It lists 'Send to Kindle Email Address' – copy/paste that address and you're all set.

Tidbits from the Vinalhaven Historical Society

The Bloomer Girls, New York Baseball's female champions played on Vinalhaven soil Thursday afternoon—a good game too, local fans say, and add, "the girls showed fine training and played well," but the local picked team with Fred Chilles won the game. The girls and their manager were guests at Rockaway Inn.
