January Origin

January was named for the Roman god, Janus. He had two faces: on both the front and back of his head. He was the god of beginnings, endings and also the god of doorways because he could see who's coming in and who's going out, like seeing into the coming year and also seeing the past year.

The Observer
Barack Obama was our 44th President and tweeted his victory to supporters. He was universally regarded as America's first black president, but that was only half true. When a certain white congressman was accused of fathering a child with a black woman, he was said to have fathered a black child. Barack's Dad was black and his Mom white, so if the same criteria were applied, Barack would be said to be a white child so it's disingenuous to argue that Obama is black. On the other hand, given how much American resistance there is to universal inclusion, perhaps it's better if we ease into the eventuality that will one day be our first black President and what better way to do that than to have eased from white to bi-racial to legitimately black. All that aside, President Obama left office 8 years later having had much to tweet about in spite of unprecedented resistance from a congress whose leader proclaimed that his party had nothing more important to do than deny Obama a second term. He failed and in spite of that intransigence, Obama left office having accomplished a great deal. He ended the illegitimate Iraq war, pushed through the Affordable Care Act, removed barriers to equal opportunity for LGBTQ Americans, cut unemployment and homelessness among vets by half, signed the Dodd Frank Wall Street Reform Act and reversed the deplorable Bush era practice of unwarranted detention and torture and much more and tweeted about it and is widely regarded as among our top ten Presidents. He tweets often. pc

Vinalhaven Students Working on Local Boat

By Lincoln Dennison

The Vinalhaven School shop class is working on a boat owned by Vinalhaven resident James Dickey. The boat is a 19-foot Seaway from the 1970's.

Students in the shop class have been learning to use bondo, fiberglass, resin, hardener, marine paint and hand power tools to work on the boat, all under the supervision of Vocational Teacher Steve Burgess.

They have been installing the boat's frame and deck to make it sturdy and usable. The boat is in a cradle that was made by a previous shop class so that the boat is easier to access and work on, and for safety.

The work is being done outside, mainly for airflow to move the dust around and the heat of the sun to quickly dry the materials.

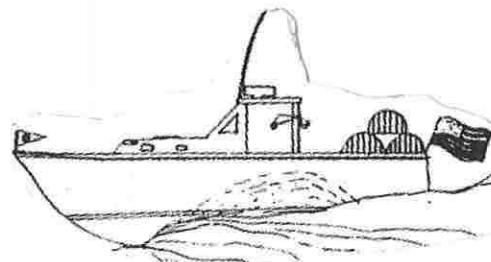

"I have worked on five boats before and know what is required to be done," said Burgess. "The customer is paying in full for all of the materials."

Burgess continued. "I expect and know that some kids already know and use the techniques and materials and that some don't, but that's ok because they learn from each other and help out as much as they can."

Senior Colby Beverage is taking shop class for his second year. "I started working on it last year, fiber glassing and painting, so a lot of it isn't new to me," he said.

The boat is expected to be finished by June and ready to be further modified by Dickey.

Islands Community Medical Services announces the launch of a new Remote Patient Monitoring (RPM) service for hypertension. This service provides continuous tracking of a patient's blood pressure and related signs and symptoms and alerts the patient's healthcare provider to changes that warrant attention. Using secure digital conferencing technology, patients can now manage their health and stay in touch with their provider – all without setting foot in a doctor's office.

Remote monitoring enables a provider to intervene quickly when necessary and focus resources on the patients who need care the most. This can improve patient health and safety and decrease unnecessary, costly utilization, such as ER visits and hospital admissions. Upon enrollment in ICMS's RPM, an individual receives a kit, including a monitoring device and blood pressure machine. The biosensors send readings to the monitoring device, which transmits the data to a BlueStar monitoring center, staffed by trained clinicians. The patient's ICMS provider is notified immediately if data indicate medical intervention is needed, as determined in advance by the provider for the individual patient.

ICMS is partnering with BlueStar Telehealth, a healthcare technology company, to use its remote monitoring platform and devices. In business since 2013, BlueStar serves thousands of families across all 50 states. The business is Service-Disabled-Veteran-Owned and certified by the Veterans Administration. Its CEO and COO are retired two-star admirals. BlueStar's board of advisors consists of 15 generals and admirals from the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, including doctors and nurses. BlueStar has won commendations from the Small Business Association, the Governor of Maryland, and the Better Business Bureau.

BlueStar's CEO, retired Admiral Robert Wray, said, "We're delighted to be able to help Islands Community deliver remote care to their patients in their homes. It's good for patients, and good for the healthcare system as a whole to be able to manage health in the home, rather than react to health crises in the Emergency Room."

"Plus," he added, smiling, "As a New Englander myself, we always like to help out fellow Patriots and Red Sox fans!"

If you are interested in learning more or enrolling in remote patient monitoring, please consult your provider or contact Janica Barrows at jbarrow@icmsvh.org or 207-863-4341.

Tidbits from the Vinalhaven Historical Society

Recently Henry Duncan and Willard Carver of North Haven were carrying lumber across the Thoroughfare, loaded upon two boats connected by the lumber reaching across each. The boats were so over-loaded that they filled and sunk, leaving the two men upon the little pile of lumber out in the middle of the waters of the Thoroughfare and no way to reach the shore. After hours of weary waiting, while they were drifting helpless and alone, a boat happened their way and relieved them from their uncontrollable craft and assisted them in towing it to the shore.

The ending of the old year 1918 marks an epoch in the history of Vinalhaven by the closing of the Bodwell Granite Co. Store. It was the oldest corporation of the town and the original company being Bodwell & Webster, established nearly 60 years ago: In 1874 it was the Bodwell Granite Co., Inc. The business was located in the Carver Block in 1879, where they continued to do business until Dec. 31, 1918. E. P. Walker first had charge of the store, then E. S. Bodwell, I. C. Glidden and F. L. Roberts. The store will open Saturday for a 10 days' sale of the entire stock, including fixtures.

The Troublesome Rhyme

I started with a pencil,
But now I'll try my pen—
To see if something "bright" and "cute"
Will spill out from the end.

I heave a sigh and rack my brain,
For some smart piece of verse—
I'll probably end up again
Starting from the first.

I think of this—I think of that—
Oh, what a dreadful time!
I think I'll start again (someday)
And try some different lines.

Even The Rocks Are Breathing

I am filled with peace
whenever a wooded trail
brings me to water
it may be the fact of all the light reflected from sky or that, having worked to get there, my heart and lungs are open, but I am more enamored of the idea that since it is most of what I am
made up of, water returns me
to my liquid self and I am poured into wherever I am completely

I become what I see (as if I were) a soft caress for whatever I stand upon a satisfaction for whatever
I touch, whether it be a pond
or an ocean
I am stretched beyond myself
not just in feeling
not just in awareness
but in becoming till I've merged with an essence that sustains it all
and we breathe as one.

Deli Diaries

Dallas, as everyone knows, was a man who couldn't say no to anyone, except me that is. Once, when he was cutting meat, I was sent to the store to get something for supper. I didn't have anything particular in mind, but Elaine had asked me to stop by the meat counter and ask Dallas if he could suggest something for supper. Delli said, "No, not for you but send her down to talk to me, and maybe I'll feel more inspired."

What is a Scuttlebutt and why do we like to hear it?

We can easily infer that this is a slang term for information or even gossip, usually through casual conversation, but how?

According to Merriam-Webster, a scuttlebutt referred to a cask on sailing ships in the 1800's that contained drinking water for those on board. It was later used as the name of the drinking fountain on a ship or in a Naval installation. The cask was known as a butt, while scuttle was taken from the French word escoutilles that means hatch/hole.

Because sailors usually received orders from shouting supervisors, talking amongst themselves was discouraged. Since they could congregate around the fountain, it became a place to catch up on casual conversation or even gossip. The scuttlebutt was the only place to do it. Nautical technology has made the actual scuttlebutt obsolete, but the term has lasted as a catch-all word for unfounded rumors.

Fun Birthdate

Bessie Coleman: Jan. 26, 1892
One of 13 children born to two Texas sharecroppers, Bessie had a long way to go to become an aviator. When no one in the US would teach a Black woman to fly, she learned French and trained at the Somme in 1920. She was not only the 1st Black American woman & 1st Native American woman to earn a pilot's license, but she was also the 1st person of African American descent or Native American descent to hold an international pilot's license. With further training, she became a barnstormer & gained stardom. Her dream was to open an aviation school, but sadly she died when her plane developed engine problems.
